Can you walk like a crab? Have a go walking sideways yourself!
<h3 style="color: magenta;">Crab Walk</h3>

Main Teaching
Read the poem. Sideways You walk forward but I walk sideways Scampering along, fast and free My left legs pull and my right legs push If I'm lucky, you won't see me You look forwards but I look sideways Scuttling along in the spray My right legs push and my left legs pull As the sand shakes. You're coming my way You have two legs I have eight Mine go sideways Yours go straight Your house is dry Mine is wet

You are safe
I'm under threat

From the gulls and the turtles
And children like you
Who like snatching little creatures
From rock pools so blue

You run forwards but I run sideways
Scurrying along, fast and free
My left legs pull and my right legs push
As I sprint for the safety of the sea

This poem is written from the point of view of a crab. Discuss the movement of the crab and how it is explained.

Watch the video of a slow motion video of the seagull flying.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=5JWEtI54Vqo>

Explain how to change the poem to write about another sea creature.

Seagull

You walk forward but I fly high in the sky
Soaring along, fast and free
My left wing pushes and my right wing pulls
If I'm lucky, you won't see me

You look forwards but I look sideways
Fluttering along in the spray
My right wing pushes and my left wing pulls
As the sand shakes. You're coming my way

Write your own poem about a dolphin.

<https://vimeo.com/107144810> Use the video to watch how dolphins move.

You walk forward but I _____ _____ along, fast and free

My left _____ and my right _____
If I'm lucky, you won't see me

You look forwards but I look _____ _____ along in the spray

My right _____ and my left _____
As the sand shakes. You're coming my way

You have two legs
I have _____ Mine go _____
Yours go straight

Learning Review

Try and learn a few lines from your own poem to perform. Try and read the lines to make them sound like a poem.

Watch this example to help you.
